A year ago at this time it was but 26 inches below highwater mark, and it is stated that this year's mark is the lowest the pond ever was at this time of the year.

This is due to the very small rainfall there has been this spring, as the months of April, May, June and thus far in July have provided but 7.45 inches of precipitation. This steady drop in the reservoir calls for the most careful use of the city water, and gives indication at an early date of what may be expected unless there is a heavy rainfall and that followed by many more.
